A High Point program

CASTLE Treatment:

Consists of a spiritual component consistent with traditional substance use disorder care that is merged with state-of-the-art knowledge about adolescent brain development, resulting in an innovative approach to substance use disorder treatment.

Working with highly trained and skilled staff, adolescents and young people have a rigorous daily schedule, including creating and meeting daily goals, participating in classroom time with specialized teachers (if applicable), and attending groups like “Motivation to Change,” “Stinkin’ Thinkin,” “Triggers,” “Relapse Prevention,” and “Art & Music Therapy.”

Young people from the community visit to give “commitments,” talking about their personal battles with and victories over addiction. Routinely viewed by patients as both inspiring and sobering, the “commitments” encourage patients in their own recovery and abstinence. This, in addition to other therapies, can serve as springboards for discussion about the relationships between parents and their children.

~ A High Point Program ~

High Point’s mission is to prevent and treat substance use disorders and mental illness.

Our goal is to help individuals and families achieve personal change and improve their quality of life.

maintain the goals of being clean and sober

The still developing brain is especially vulnerable to addictions...

Addiction can happen any time but never in a vacuum.

With an appreciation of an individual’s home environment, social environment, self-concept, and biology, we help young people and their families to understand how addictions start and what fuels them.

Young people learn what needs to change, how to change, and how such change is really more in their control than they realized. CASTLE helps them learn how to replace drugs and alcohol with productive and constructive outlets, and enjoy these successes at home, in their social world, and the way they feel about themselves.

CASTLE is a High Point program, well-known for its quality care of adults, who struggle with addictions. That same quality is applied to young people because we recognize this population is at high-risk for lifelong addictions if they are not provided with early intervention and treatment.
